

Abstract

The electronic library is an electronic user interface for use in a library where the books/items are stored away from the user accessible area. Users are therefore not in contact with the hard copies of books/items but can view electronic copies of them on the electronic user interface. From there they may request the hard copies. A robotic system may be employed for the delivery of hard copies.